

Note: The Kalyana Raman Premarital Readiness Assessment explores relationship expectations, personal values, and areas that may require further discussion before marriage. However, the assessment results alone cannot determine compatibility or reliably predict marital success. You are advised to schedule a session with your therapist for the triangulation process, during which your assessment results will be reviewed alongside your therapist's observations and relevant information gathered through professional discussion. This process aims to develop a more comprehensive understanding of your responses, identify areas of alignment or discrepancy, and highlight topics that may benefit from further exploration.